A Complimentary Investor Briefing

Why Lentor. Why now.

A maturing Thomson–East Coast Line precinct meets the cheapest land basis of the Lentor enclave — secured before the official price is public.

Macro 01

1.5–2.5%
Imported inflation

MAS and MTI project core inflation in this band for 2026 with upside risk. Persistent imported inflation supports hard assets.
Source · MAS / MTI 2026 forecast

Macro 02

~20%
Build-cost increase

Building material costs are up roughly 20%, holding the floor under replacement cost. Today's land bank prices tomorrow's build cost.
Source · SCAL material tracking

Macro 03

S$47–53B
Construction pipeline

BCA projects this in 2026 construction contracts — anchored by Changi T5, Tuas Port, NSC, JRL and CRL. The strongest lead indicator of housing demand.

Source · BCA 2026 forecast

Three forces are quietly pushing the replacement cost of every new Singapore home higher every year. When build cost keeps rising, a lower land basis can support value over time — a thesis about cost, not a promise about price.

Who the precinct is built for.

Six prior Lentor launches have already voted. The buyer profile is well established — a maturing North-East corridor with proven absorption.

01

North-side HDB upgraders

Families who want to stay near the same schools, parents and grandparents. A clean HDB-to-private ladder step within Ang Mo Kio / Yishun catchment.

Indicative entry from ~S$1.32M on 2BR

02

Portfolio investors

Reading a land-cost case, not a render. Comfortable holding 7–10 years for capital appreciation across estate maturation.

Land basis ~38.9% below adjacent parcel

03

Restructuring couples

Dual-income households restructuring an existing portfolio. Considering a fresh 99-year lease in a transit-anchored, school-anchored estate.

Fresh 99-yr lease, est. Q1 2029 TOP

Not the right fit if you need yield above all else · you want a freehold tenure · you are not comfortable doing developer due diligence on Kingsford

Read it candidly: the land came cheap for a real reason – Kingsford bid more aggressively than established names. The trade-off is the developer, not the location. We address that on slide 9 with Normanton Park on the record, not buried.

URA 2025 Masterplan tailwinds

A precinct being reimagined around it.

01

North-South Corridor. Singapore's first integrated transport corridor, continuous bus & cycling lanes, materially upgrading access to the city centre.

02

Woodlands Regional Centre & RTS Link. ~700,000 sqm of fresh commercial space and a new rental catchment for adjacent precincts.

03

North-east intensification. Masterplan upzones for mixed-use and residential growth, preserving land scarcity in the Lentor core.

Who benefits, profile by profile.

The 499-unit mix is 2- and 3-bedroom led — matching URA's projection of smaller, more numerous households.

Risks, honestly read.

Hard Honest Truth: strengths and watch-items both. The same framework Winfred runs on his own portfolio.

01 · Capital Strong A materially lower land basis than the adjacent parcel in a corridor that has repriced upward across six launches.	02 · Cashflow Moderate Precinct gross yield band around 3.5%. Respectable, not spectacular. A capital story, not a yield story.	03 · Progression Strong A clean HDB-to-private ladder step for north-side families staying near schools and grandparents.	04 · Protection Mixed Liveable, maturing estate + fresh lease are positives. The developer's build-quality history is the genuine watch-item.

Said plainly, not buried · the developer file Kingsford has delivered multiple completed Singapore residential projects. The headline episode is Normanton Park. They issued a no-sale licence from 2019 to 2020. That is on the record.	Hold horizon: 7–10 years for the capital story; near-term flippers face moderate yield and resale competition as nearby blocks TOP. We address build risk through contract, snagging and DLP. not by ignoring it.
